I am a print and textile designer whose research is developed within a design framework, but I also consider my creations as plastic researches around drawing, color, and printing mediums. That's why in each of my projects, the first step of the design process is always a graphic research by hand to keep a handmade feel in the finished work. I'm also interested in perfecting my knowledge of the industrial process of digital printing, as I feel it's necessary in order to bring a more experimental approach in my work.
